Colonel Bill fished a pair of spec acles out of his side pocket and deliberstely perched them astride of his He read the letter through very The night editor was in a slowly. fever of impatience. Even the imperturhable editor-in-chief was considerahly more sgitated than usual,

"I s'pose I'm partly responsible for it," said old liamilton; "for I was down at the city hall the other night when they had that hig meeting, and I happened to mention that Gormly reminded me of a young feller I used to know out at the camp named Fordyce, George Fordyce, to a fellow there. He was slick, smooth and agreeable enough and we had a couple of drinks together and I let out more'n I'd ought to. Since then, however, I've been doin' a little quiet investigatin' on my own hook, and l've here in this tin hox, which I brought down with me and which I keep locked all the time, some documents you might like to see."

The night editor groaned over the long windedness of the frontiersman. Ar. Atlanta 7:25 p.m. "What's the matter, sonny?" asked Colonel Bill solicitously. "Ain't siek, are you ...

"No, no," was the answer, "But go on, please, Colonel Hamilton," said the editor; "and will you he ns explicit as possible. We are holding up the paper in the hope that you he able to throw some light on this matter, and time is of the greatest importance.

"I see," was the reply. "Well, then, all that's written in that paper's true enough; but he ain't told all the

The editor nodded. "That settles

"No, it don't," was the reply, "For when we got there, as I said, he warn't dead, and we managed to revive him with a good drink of liquor, which Pete Breeden-that was his namealways would respond to," he interpolsted. "And he mansged to say a few words." "What were they?" "He said that his wife shot him and run off with Fordyea."

"Anything more?" "Then he died." "I see," said the editor. "Gormly took the hiame upon himself to shield the woman." "It will be Colonel Hamilton's un supported statement against this writ-
